BRANCHES FOR THE CARNEGIE LIBRARY

Donor May Establish Additional Institutions.

New York.

Plans of the Project Well Received. Architects' Competition Soon

Andrew Carnegie, who has donated public libraries to so many cities in this ountry and Scotland, has not only given $250,000 for the erection of a magnificent structure of that character in Washington, but has now signified a willingness to establish branch libraries here, if the demand warrants such action after the completion of the proposed building in Mount Vernon Square.

Mr. Carnegie intimated to Commissioner Wight, B. H. Warner, and Bernard R. Green, who have just returned from New York, where they had a conference with him, that he would be pleased to contrib-Remnants are made a specialty ute the money for such branch libraries, provided that time interposes no obstacle. Messrs. Wight, Warner, and Green met Mr. Carnegie in his New York residence, and were cordially greeted. Mr. Carnegie said be was delighted at the energetic and businesslike manner in which the citizens of Washington and the Library Commis sion have interested themselves in the Li-brary scheme. Mr. Wight took with him a large official plat of Mount Vernon Square, the site of the Library, and this plan was presented to Mr. Carnegie. It showed the various lines of approach, eight in number, which lead to and from the square like spokes from the hub of a wheel. Mr. Carnegie was well pleased with the site select because we have culled from dif-ferent departments odds and ends which must vacate these

New York and other cities, showing his interest in library construction, and explained the various advantages and disadvantages of these structures.

Mr. Carnegie said that he thought the day had passed for the erection of colossal library buildings. He thought the age was more utilitarian and practical, and that the time had come for the building of a reasonably large library in the centre of a city, with adjuncts in the form of branch libraries in the more remote portions of the city. Mr. Carnegie thought the mission of the public library was to place the knowledge and literature of the world within easy rach of the public, and to do this they should be easy of access. One of the difficulties of library work in large citics has been this very thing, and it has been met by the Boston Public Library and the Enoch Pratt Library in Ba timore by the establishment of the branch libraries favored by Mr. Carnegie. Mr. Carnegie made no promise that he would establish these branches but intimated that he could and signified a willingness to do so, aless misfortune interrupted his present

He had particular stress on the point that the building should be above all things complete and perfectly equipped. But with the money available, Mr. Carnegie thought beauty would not have to be sacrifized to make the building have to be sacrificed to make the building complete and practical. Mr. Carnegic in-formed Mr. Wight that he was willing not only to bear the entire expense of the proposed structure, but would pay any incidental expenses above the amount al-

Some three seasons ago, when "The Wedding Day" was brought to this city with three stars in the cast a great deal of comment was provoked at the costilness of the presenting organization. Times have changed since then, however, and it is not now probable that anything streets. than a great business will be stimulated by the coming of "La Belle Helene" to the Lafayette next week with a company, in which are included no less than four performed Mr. Wight that he was willing not only to bear the entire expense of the proposed structure, but would pay any incidental expenses above the amount already donated.

The Library Commission will meet in a few days and invite the ten architects who will submit competitive designs for the proposed structure. Colonel Bingham, Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, and Engineer Commissioner Beach were appointed a committee at the last meeting to prepare rules which will govern the office of Superintendent of Construction and the next meeting of the entire Commission depends entirely on the progress made by these two members. They have almost completed their work and as

Among the theatrical celebrities who will appear in next week's bill at the Grand are such people as Georgia Gardner and Edgar Atchison-Ely, who will be seen in their breezy sketch, "My Wife's Stratagem;" George Felix and Lydia Barry, who introduce many specialties in their perform-ance of "The Vaudeville Craze;" "The ance of the vaudeville Craze, the Bootblack Quintette," formerly a feature with Hyde's "Comedians;" Gertle Coch-ran, a nine-year-old child who is described Bootblack Quintette," formerly a feature with Hyde's "Comedians," Gertle Cochran, a nine-year-old child who is described as the "mental wonder." This week's bill at the Grand is a good one and the list of announcements makes it appear that the next will be even better.

bia Theatre. The subject is especially interesting at this time and Mr. Holmes handled it most interestingly, interpolating bright anecdotes and humorous characterizations of people he had met while in Honolulu with the data and descriptions that went to make up the lecture. Those present appeared most appreciative and the applause given was hearty. The talk was illustrated with lantern slides colored by Katerine Gorden Breed. Mr. Holmes will be heard this evening on "Fez, the Metropolis of the Moors."

That most stirring of all Sousa's marches, "El Cspitan," is a part and parcel of the opera from which it takes its name and which will be next week's attraction at the ringing chords which end it are not heard until the finale of the second act, when the principals, an enlarged orchestra, a great chorus and a military band all combine to give the melody spirit and fire that is said to bring audiences to their feet and to make necessary a dozen curtain calls nightmake necessary a dozen curtain calls nightly. Only Sousa writes such music and only Sousa's operas can bring forth the audiences expected during the local engagement of "El Capitan."

Of the singers who will be heard here during the second week in April with the Metropolitan Opera Company is Marie En-gle. Mirs Engle has been identified with the organization for the past three sea-sons, and among the lyric artists who have sons, and among the tyric artists who have become familiar to New York audiences she holds a place peculiarly her own without competition. She is said to have a high light soprano of exquisite timbre, clear, true, and flexible. In certain coloratura arias it is difficult to distinguish her voice from the flute or clarinet, save that the voice quality is more intense and symthe voice quality is more intense and symthe voice quanty is more intense and sym-pathetic and thus impossible to be imi-tated on any instrument. Added to her vocal gifts Miss Engle supposedly posses-ses a charming personality, a beautiful face and superb physique, as well as a stage experience dating from her early wirthood.

Manager Kernan's next attraction ap-pears under the cognomen of "Miss New York, Jr." and includes the services of several people well known in vaudeville circles. Among these are "The Casino Comedy Four." Post and Clinton, "The Craig Trio." Crane, the Leonards and Marty O'Neill. These entertainers not only appear in the olio but take part in the two burlesques to be offered, "Yankees in Cuba" and "Fun on the Royal B'ue Line." Seats for the engagement are on sale.

Manager Grieves has not yet comple ed the task of arranging his bill for next week at the Bijou. PLEADED NOT GUILTY. iew York Man Suspected of Stenling

Diamond Jewelry. Michael Russell fifty-two years of age, was arrested last night by Detectives Parham and Gallaher and locked up at No. 1 station on suspicion of being guilty of Bridges. Bridges was taken with a batch a robbery committed at the store of S. of offenders to the penitentiary by Sheriff Desio, at 1012 F Street northwest, yesterday. Russell denies his guilt and states that he is a saloon keeper in New York aware that Bridges is a fictitious name, but that he is a saloon keeper in New York city. He explains his presence in the city by saying that he came here to play the races, which begin next Monday.

The story of the robbery, as told by Mr. Desio, is that two men entered his store at 6:30 yesterday evening and that one of them purchased a set of small diamond earrings and a small diamond earrings and a small diamond pin, for which he paid $8. Mr. Desio identifies Russell as the purchaser. About twenty minutes after the men departed Mr. Desio missed from a tray which he had exhibited a pair of diamond earrings valued at $80 and a diamond horseshoe-pin valued at $40. He immediately telephoned the fact to Inspector Boardman, who detailed Detecand a diamond horsesnoe-pin valued at 40. He immediately telephoned the fact to Inspector Boardman, who detailed Detectives Parham and Gallaher on the case.

The detectives closely questioned Mr. Desio in the hopes of establishing the identity of the men. They got a good description of the pair, and were surprised on leaving the store to find Russell walking along F Street. They immediately placed him under arrest and took him to headquarters. Russell stated when arrested that he was innocent of the theft, and when taken into custody was on his way to the jewelry store in search of an umbrella which he had left there while making purchases. A search for the umbrella failed to disclose it.

Late last night Major Sylvester received a telegram from Captain McClusky, Chief of Police, in New York, in which he stated that Russell was the proprietor of a saloon in that city and a man of good standing. The telegram was in answer to an enquiry made by Major Sylvester concerning the man. It is not improbable that, after all, Mr. Russell has been a victim of circumstances and is entirely innocent.

Prominently Related Here. Among the criminals recently tried and convicted in Hagerstown, Md., was a secret. order swindler, who called himself F. E. D. M. Tice yesterday.

The authorities at Hagerstown are well during his trial the identity of the prison er has been kept a secret. It is said in Hagerstown that the police and court authorities have kept the name of the prison er from the public because of a desire to shield his family, which is said to be ver prominent in this city.

Bridges said before being taken away that he would never reveal the name of his confederates in the swindling operations for which he was convicted. He said that the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias had pursued him for four years and through eleven States, but that he had managed to elude arrest. He also said that he had broken out of jail once in Massa-chusetts. Bridges, it is said, stated before going to the penitentiary that he had de-termined to lead a better life.

Not Seriously Injured.

William T. Hall, twenty-three years of age, a brakeman employed by the Baltiore and Potomac Railroad Company while engaged in shifting cars at the Baltimore and Ohio junction, in Anacostia, at 9 o'clock last night, fell from a car and was hurt about the spine. He was removed to the Providence Hospital in No. 4 patrol wagon and received treatment. Enquiry at the hospital late this after-noon revealed that Hall was not seriously injured.
